ITEM 9 - REGULATION FD DISCLOSURE

On March 10, 2003, Weyerhaeuser Company a press release stating the following:

FEDERAL WAY, Wash. - Hancock Timber Resource Group will acquire the approximately 104,000-acre Snoqualmie Tree Farm from Weyerhaeuser Company (NYSE: WY) for a purchase price of $185 million, the two companies jointly announced today. The sale is expected to close in the second quarter of 2003.

"This is a unique investment opportunity for Hancock Timber," said Dan Christensen, president and chief operating officer of the Hancock Timber Resource Group. "The forest is outstanding timberland with exceptional environmental and recreational qualities in a great location."

"Weyerhaeuser has managed this property well and we believe that tradition will continue under Hancock Timber's stewardship," said Steven R. Rogel, Weyerhaeuser chairman, president and chief executive officer. "This is a significant step for us in our continuing strategy of evaluating our timberlands and manufacturing facilities to increase our competitiveness, enhance our operating efficiencies, and better serve customer needs. We will use the proceeds from this sale to help us pay down our debt."

Weyerhaeuser announced in January 2002 that it intended to sell the Snoqualmie Tree Farm to the Evergreen Forest Trust. The Trust planned to finance the transaction with tax-exempt bonds, which required congressional approval. The Trust was unable to gain that approval within the one-year period specified in the purchase and sale agreement. The agreement expired January 16, 2003.

"We value our relationship with the Evergreen Forest Trust and we regret it wasn't able to secure the financing necessary to purchase the forestland within the agreed-upon time," said Rogel. He noted that Hancock Timber has expressed interest in discussions with conservation groups regarding possible solutions to protecting key environmental qualities of the property.

"Hancock Timber Resource Group has a long history of working with conservation groups to protect sensitive lands," Christensen said. "We genuinely look forward to exploring opportunities to protect the sensitive areas of the Snoqualmie Forest as we have done in the past with many other local communities and conservation groups."

Following the sale, Weyerhaeuser will own or manage approximately 1.2 million acres of timberland in Washington. Upon completion of the deal, Hancock Timber will manage approximately 420,000 acres of timberland in the Northwest, including approximately 230,000 acres in Washington State.
