On January 5, 2016, Endocyte, Inc., a leader in developing targeted small molecule drug conjugates (SMDCs), announced that the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana dismissed the shareholder class action lawsuit filed in 2014 against Endocyte and certain of its officers, directors and underwriters in connection with the events leading up to cessation of the PROCEED Phase 3 clinical trial. In dismissing the lawsuit without prejudice, the Court stated that the plaintiffs must "demonstrate sufficient facts exist to justify an amended pleading" by February 1, 2016, or face a dismissal with prejudice.
