SENIOR MANAGEMENT CHANGES
AT CORPORATE, INVESTMENT BANKING AND MARKETS

HSBC today announced that Stuart Gulliver is to assume sole responsibility for the Group's Corporate, Investment Banking and Markets (CIBM) businesses with immediate effect. Stuart will also assume responsibility for HSBC's Group Investment Businesses.

HSBC has made significant progress developing its CIBM businesses in the last three years under the joint leadership of Stuart Gulliver and John Studzinski. With the investment phase nearly complete, CIBM's pre-tax profits of US$5.2 billion in 2005 represented a quarter of the Group's profits worldwide. The business has clear momentum and has reached a level of development that makes it appropriate to fully integrate these businesses under the sole leadership of Stuart Gulliver.

As Head of CIBM, Stuart takes over the global banking responsibilities of John Studzinski, who is leaving HSBC later this year to become a senior managing director and partner with the Blackstone Group, the global investment and advisory firm. Alain Dromer, CEO of HSBC's Group Investment Businesses, will also report directly to Stuart.

Stuart Gulliver said: "We have achieved significant momentum in M&A and equity capital markets over the last three years. These areas are essential competencies for a Group of our size with significant relationships with financial institutions and corporates around the globe. The linkages with our Global Markets business, including equities, and with our financing platform are proven, and M&A and ECM will remain a priority for me.

"With our Group Investment Businesses, HSBC has already put in place a clear and ambitious strategy for growing this area with all customers worldwide. Early results are very encouraging. I fully support Alain and his team in driving this fast-growing business forward."

John Studzinski will focus on client work until he leaves HSBC on 30 September 2006. After that date, he will continue his professional relationship with HSBC in the form of an advisor to HSBC's senior management.

Joining the Blackstone Group in the autumn, John will be on the firm's executive committee and will have a global business role, dividing his time principally between London and New York.

John Studzinski said: "This is a big and exciting change I have thought about a lot. The opportunity to work in the very different environment of a smaller, private partnership, which at the same time offers all the challenges of a hugely successful global business, was something I found irresistibly attractive.

"The decision to leave HSBC has been made easier by knowing that the investment bank is really beginning to show what it is capable of, with a strong core operation currently involved in four of the biggest M&A transactions in Europe. All the reasons that encouraged me to join HSBC in the first place - its brand, network and emerging markets franchise - are even stronger today, so the investment bank can look to the future with confidence."

Explaining the new structure, Stephen Green, Group Chief Executive of HSBC, said: "We embarked on our five year strategic plan for CIBM in 2003, and the business is clearly gaining momentum. The success of our strategy was demonstrated in 2005 earnings growth across several key product areas.

"We have established a leading position in foreign exchange, transaction banking, project and export finance and in funds administration. The investment banking business is gaining traction and has secured advisory roles in several landmark transactions this year, building on the progress achieved in 2005.

"The major investment phase of building our investment banking business is almost complete. John's contribution over the last three years has been immense and we will continue to enjoy the benefit of his advice at a senior level. As we move the business forward, it is appropriate to fully integrate the management and in Stuart we have a world class professional to lead it.

"Building our corporate, investment banking and markets business remains an absolutely core component of our global growth strategy."
