Economic review
While the U.S. economy continued to expand over the six months ended November 30, 2010, economic data was mixed and remained elevated. The Federal Reserve Board (Fed )i expressed concerns regarding the direction of the economy and took an attempt to spur growth. This initially caused investor sentiment to improve, but the financial markets declined toward the eperiod given a re-escalation of the European sovereign debt crisis.	additional actions in
In September 2010, the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER), the organization charged with determining when end, announced that the recession that began in December 2007 had concluded in June 2009. However, the NBER said, In d trough occurred in June 2009, the committee did not conclude that economic conditions since that month have been favorable economy has returned to operating at normal capacity. The NBER s point is well-taken given continued areas of weakness	determining that a e or that the
Although the U.S. Department of Commerce continued to report positive U.S. gross domestic product (GDP) iii growth, the moderated since peaking at 5.0% in the fourth quarter of 2009. A slower drawdown in business inventories and renewed cons were contributing factors spurring the economy s solid growth at the end of 2009. However, the economy has grown at a mo far in 2010. According to the Commerce Department, GDP growth was 3.7% and 1.7% during the first and second quarters o respectively. GDP growth then edged somewhat higher to 2.6% in the third quarter.	sumer spending ore modest pace thus
Turning to the job market, after experiencing sharp job losses in 2009, the U.S. Department of Labor reported that over one magnetions were added during the first five months of 2010. Included in that number, however, were 700,000 temporary govern the 2010 Census. From June through September, more than 525,000 of these temporary positions were eliminated. This more sector growth and resulted in a total net loss of 300,000 jobs from June through September. The employment picture then brig in October, as 172,000 new jobs were created. Payrolls then increased a disappointing 39,000 in November and the unemploy up to end the period at 9.8%. The unemployment rate has now exceeded 9.0% since May 2009.	nment jobs tied to than offset private ghtened somewhat

There was mixed news in the housing market during the period. According to the National Association of Realtors (NAR), existing-home sales increased 7.0% and 8.0% in March and April, respectively, after sales had fallen for the period from December 2009 through February 2010. The rebound was largely attributed to people rushing to take advantage of the government s$8,000 tax credit for first-time home buyers that expired at the end of April. However, with the end of the tax credit, existing-home sales then declined from May through July. Sales then rose 7.3% and 10.0% in August and September, respectively. Sales then dipped 2.2% in October and rose 5.6% in November. Looking at home prices, the NAR reported that the median existing-home price for all housing types was $170,600 in November 2010, which was 0.4% higher than in November 2009. Prices appeared to stabilize somewhat as the number of existing homes on the market declined in November. The inventory of unsold homes was a 9.5 month supply in November at the current sales level, versus a 10.5 month supply in October.

One overall bright spot for the economy has been the manufacturing sector. Based on the Institute for Supply Management s PMIiii, the manufacturing sector has grown sixteen consecutive months since it began expanding in August 2009. After reaching a six-year peak of 60.4 in April 2010, PMI data indicated somewhat more modest growth from May through July (a reading below 50 indicates a contraction, whereas a reading above 50 indicates an expansion). The manufacturing sector then expanded at a faster pace in August, before moderating somewhat in September. Manufacturing then grew in October at its fastest pace since May with a reading of 56.9 for the month, before dipping to 56.6 in November.

Outside of the U.S., economic news was largely dominated by the sovereign debt crisis in Europe. In May (prior to the beginning of the reporting period), the European Union (EU) and International Monetary Fund (IMF) announced a 750 billion ($955 billion) plan to aid fiscally troubled Eurozone countries. Investors were initially skeptical that the bailout plan would be sufficient to stem the contagion of the debt crisis to other peripheral European countries. However, the debt crisis largely moved to the back burner until November 2010, when Ireland s economic issues took center stage and resulted in another rescue package from the EU and IMF. Given the economic strains in the Eurozone, the IMF projects that growth in the region will be a modest 1.7% in 2010. Expectations for Japan s economy are better but still relatively tepid, as the IMF s forecast for the country s economy is a 2.8% expansion in 2010. In contrast, many emerging market countries are experiencing strong economic growth. The IMF projects that China s economy will expand 10.5% in 2010 and that India s economy will grow 9.7% during the year.

Financial market overview

As the reporting period began, the financial markets were regaining their footing following a sharp sell-off that had begun in late April and continued throughout much of May. During this period, risk aversion was elevated and investors flocked to the relative safety of U.S. Treasury securities. Demand for the fixed-income spread sectors (non-Treasuries) then resumed in June and July, followed by another flight to quality in August. Risk appetite then returned in September and October before the financial markets again weakened beginning in mid-November.

Due to signs that economic growth was slowing toward the end of the reporting period, the Fed took further actions to spur the economy. At its August 10th meeting, the Fed announced an ongoing program that calls for using the proceeds from expiring agency debt and agency mortgage-backed securities to purchase longer-dated Treasury securities.

In addition, the Fed remained cautious throughout the reporting period given pockets of weakness in the economy. At its meeting in September 2010, the Fed said, The Committee will continue to monitor the economic outlook and financial developments and is prepared to provide additional accommodation if needed to support the economic recovery. . . . This led to speculation that the Fed may again move to purchase large amounts of agency and

Western Asset Emerging Markets Income Fund Inc.

Treasury securities in an attempt to avoid a double-dip recession and ward off deflation.

The Fed then took additional action in early November. Citing that the pace of recovery in output and employment continues to be slow, the Fed announced another round of quantitative easing to help stimulate the economy, entailing the purchase of $600 billion of long-term U.S. Treasury securities by the end of the second quarter of 2011. This, coupled with the Fed s previously announced program to use the proceeds of expiring securities to purchase Treasuries, means it could buy a total of $850 billion to $900 billion of Treasury securities by the end of June 2011.

Given the economic challenges in the Eurozone, the European Central Bank ( ECB ) kept interest rates at 1.0% during the reporting period. The ECB has kept rates at this historic low since the middle of 2009. A similar stance was taken by the Bank of England as it kept rates on hold at 0.5% during the period. Japan, however, cut rates in October 2010 from 0.1% to a range of zero to 0.1%, the lowest level since 2006. In contrast, a number of emerging market countries, including China, India and Brazil, raised interest rates during the reporting period in an effort to ward off inflation.

Fixed-income market review

As discussed earlier, just prior to the beginning of the six-month reporting period, investor risk aversion was elevated due to the escalating sovereign debt crisis in Europe. In addition, there were uncertainties regarding new financial reforms in the U.S. and some worse-than-expected economic data. Most spread sectors then produced positive absolute returns in June and July, as investor demand for these securities again increased. There was another bout of risk aversion in August, given fears that the economy may slip back into a recession. However, with the Fed indicating the possibility of another round of quantitative easing, most spread sectors rallied in September and October. The spread sectors then ended the reporting period on a weak note as financial troubles in Ireland resulted in a re-emergence of the European sovereign debt crisis.

Both short- and long-term Treasury yields fluctuated but, overall, moved lower during the six months ended November 30, 2010. When the period began, two- and ten-year Treasury yields were 0.76% and 3.31%, respectively. On June 3, 2010, two- and ten-year Treasury yields peaked at 0.82% and 3.39%, respectively. Subsequent to hitting their highs for the period, yields largely declined during much of the remainder of the reporting period. When the period ended on November 30, 2010, two-year Treasury yields were 0.45%, versus a low of 0.33% earlier in the month. Ten-year Treasury yields ended the period at 2.81%, which was higher than their trough of 2.41% that occurred in October. Longer-term yields moved higher toward the end of the period as fears of future inflation increased in light of the Fed s additional policy accommodation. For the six months ended November 30, 2010, the Barclays Capital U.S. Aggregate Indexiv returned 3.85%. In contrast, the Barclays Capital Global Aggregate Index (Hedged)v returned 1.99% over the same time frame.

The U.S. high-yield bond market produced strong results during the reporting period. The asset class posted positive returns during each month, except for November 2010 when risk aversion rose sharply. The high-yield market was supported by better-than-expected corporate profits and overall strong investor demand. All told, the Barclays Capital U.S. High Yield 2% Issuer Cap Indexvi returned 9.42% for the six months ended November 30, 2010.

Emerging market debt prices rallied over the reporting period, also posting positive returns each month during the period except for November 2010. This solid performance was triggered by strong economic growth in many emerging market countries, solid domestic demand and generally robust investor demand for the asset class. The JPMorgan Emerging Markets Bond Index Global (EMBI Global) viii returned 8.82% over the six months ended November 30, 2010.

Performance review

For the six months ended November 30, 2010, Western Asset Emerging Markets Income Fund Inc. returned 11.64% based on its net asset value (NAV) viii and 16.94% based on its New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) market price per share. The Funds unmanaged benchmark, the EMBI Global, returned 8.82% for the same period. The Lipper Emerging Markets Debt Closed-End Funds Category Averageix returned 10.52% over the same time frame. Please note that Lipper performance returns are based on each funds NAV.

During this six-month period, the Fund made distributions to shareholders totaling $0.46 per share, which may have included a return of capital. Economic Exposure November 30, 2010

Spread duration measures the sensitivity to changes in spreads. The spread over Treasuries is the annual risk-premium demanded by investors to hold non-Treasury securities. Spread duration is quantified as the % change in price resulting from a 100 basis points change in spreads. For a security with positive spread duration, an increase in spreads would result in a price decline and a decline in spreads would result in a price increase. This chart highlights the market sector exposure of the Fund s portfolio and the exposure relative to the selected benchmark as of the end of the reporting period.
