SPDR Gold Shares: A leading Institutional Vehicle for Gold Exposure

Launched in 2004, SPDR Gold Shares (GLD) was the first US-domiciled gold bullion-backed exchange traded fund (ETF). While other products have come to market, GLD remains the clear choice* for large institutional investors who understand that when choosing a gold ETF, there are many factors to consider.

LIQUIDITY

One key factor to consider for institutional investors is the size of the market in which the security is traded because volume is a key determinant of cost. GLD is the most traded gold ETF in the US, with a 12-month average daily notional trading volume 19 times higher than its closest competitor (Figure 1).

Liquidity can be a source of cost advantage for large institutional investors because higher liquidity means tighter bid/ask spreads, which translates into lower trading costs for investors. Whether opening or closing a position, rebalancing, or tactically over/under weighting, trading GLD is a leading choice. However, there can be no assurance that a liquid market will be maintained for ETF shares.

OPTIONS LIQUIDITY

Trading GLD options is less expensive for the same reasons as trading GLD shares. GLD's options market is 469 times larger than its closest competitor, meaning tighter spreads and lower trading costs on GLD options.

TRADING COMPARISON

GLD's share price is also a factor in GLD's advantage for institutional investors. Compare a hypothetical $1 million dollar investment in GLD versus IAU. The same investment buys 8,089 shares of GLD, compared to 80,321 shares of IAU, meaning investors would need to buy roughly 10 times as many shares of IAU for similar gold exposure, which could lead to much higher commission costs when paying fees on a per share basis.

SECURITIES LENDING REVENUE

Securities lending revenue can potentially offset costs for institutional investors. The average amount on loan of GLD shares in December 2013 was $1,166 million, compared to $95 million for IAU. It is important to note that the gold bullion backing GLD s shares is never traded, leased or loaned.
