PartnerRe's Merger with AXIS Enhances the Security of Preferred Shareholders

- [] Preferred shares of merged Company ([]MergeCo ") will be supported by a stronger combined balance sheet, increased equity base and enhanced, more stable earnings of MergeCo
- [] PartnerRe and AXIS currently have A- Long-Term Ratings from Standard and Poors ("SandP") and A+ Financial Strength Ratings from A. M. Best and SandP
 - [] Result in a rating for preferred securities for both PartnerRe and AXIS of BBB
- [] We are confident, based on initial feedback from rating agencies following review of the capital plan, that MergeCo's ratings (including those of preferred securities) would remain at the same current strong levels upon closing of the merger
- [] Under MergeCo, preferred shares will maintain trading liquidity supported by MergeCo's publicly listed common equity Preferred shareholders have a vote that has meaningful value, which will be maintained under[] MergeCo
 - [] PartnerRe's preferred shareholders' vote is particularly important given the absence of "Change- of-Control" / "put" provisions in a potential EXOR acquisition

Voting in favor of the merger with AXIS Capital is the best way to protect your investment in PartnerRe's preferred shares and your dividend

In Contrast, a Potential Sale to EXOR would be Detrimental to Preferred Shareholders

While EXOR's offer for PartnerRe is inferior for all of PartnerRe's shareholders, it is particularly disadvantageous to PartnerRe preferred shareholders

- [] Preferred shareholders would not benefit from EXOR's cash offer for PartnerRe's common shares of $137.50
- [] EXOR has lower Long-Term Ratings from SandP (BBB+ with a []Negative Outlook") compared to those of PartnerRe and AXIS
- [] Industrial holding company with outsized exposure to difficult auto sector
- [] EXOR's proposed transaction would include up to $4.75bn of acquisition financing, which would lead to significant pressure on the financial leverage of EXOR
- [] Up to 70% of EXOR's purchase price to be paid to common shareholders would be funded with debt
- [] Given EXOR's current ratings and the meaningful additional debt contemplated in proposed transaction financing, there is considerable risk that the rating of preferred shares would be downgraded upon sale to EXOR
- [] Rating agencies' "Negative Outlook" on EXOR's proposed transaction
- [] Risks under EXOR ownership to preferred shareholders include decrease in valuation of preferred shares, increased risk of default, loss of principal and loss of dividend payments
- [] Value of preferred share vote would be effectively nullified as a result of the EXOR transaction

EXOR's aggressive use of double leverage in a regulated industry would endanger ratings and credit profile without improving earnings

Investment Highlights of the PartnerRe / AXIS Merger

- [] Combination will create a reinsurance and insurance powerhouse with approximately $13bn combined shareholders equity⁽¹⁾
 - [] Top 5 global reinsurance franchise
 - [] Cash and invested assets of more than $31 billion
- [] Merger creates stronger combined franchise, benefiting from significant capital efficiencies and meaningful operational synergies
 - [] Preferred dividends will be supported by enhanced, more stable earnings of MergeCo, including the benefit of $200+ million of cost synergies
 - [] Greater capital efficiencies
- [] MergeCo's lower volatility profile and diversification between reinsurance and insurance will further benefit preferred shareholders and overall credit profile of the company
- [] The merger with AXIS would not result in a noticeable change to PartnerRe's current capital structure or leverage
- [] Clear common vision accelerates strategies for both companies
 - [] Growth accompanied by excellence in risk management, as demonstrated by a consistent record of reserve redundancies
 - [] Best-in-class talent who have a history of demonstrating prudence and value creation
- [] Compatible cultures facilitate integration and lower execution risk

Positive Rating Agency Feedback for Merger with AXIS

"Despite the announced approximately $560 million special cash dividend, we expect the combined company's capitalization will remain very strong and materially redundant to 'AA' level after the deal closes and through 2017."

"We anticipate the combined entity's financial leverage will stay below 25% with fixed-charge coverage of at least 4x."

"We also expect the merger to achieve at least $200 million in annual run-rate pretax cost synergies in the first two years of operations."

SandP Press Release, May 4, 2015

"Successful execution of the PRE-AXIS combination could provide positive credit benefits relating to diversification of earnings and business profile, leveraging the benefits of a larger organization."

"...if the transaction with AXIS closes as planned, Fitch would likely affirm PRE's current ratings..."

" Fitch Press Release, May 4, 2015

Potential PRE Sale to EXOR Expected to be Credit Negative

"On balance, we see [a successful EXOR bid] as credit negative since PartnerRe would miss out on an opportunity to strengthen its market position and improve its product diversification by gaining access to AXIS Capital's profitable specialty primary insurance platform. In an increasingly competitive and tiered insurance marketplace, a PartnerRe-AXIS Capital combination would provide the scale and breadth of product offerings that are highly valued by brokers and clients."

"One critical wildcard related to EXOR's bid for PartnerRe is how EXOR's capital structure would evolve post-acquisition. EXOR's debt would significantly increase through the use of up to $4.75 billion in bridge loans to finance the deal and the consolidation of PartnerRe's debt."

Moody's, Apr 20, 2015

"The negative outlook reflects our view that if the PartnerRe acquisition is completed, EXOR's LTV may exceed our 20% threshold for the ratings. It also reflects our view that EXOR's listed assets may fall below 60% of total assets, which we believe would not be commensurate with our current assessment of a 'satisfactory' business risk profile."

"We would likely revise [EXOR's] outlook to stable if the [PartnerRe] acquisition does not close."

SandP, Apr 17, 2015

- * Preferred shareholders are protected by enhanced fixed charge coverage profile
- * After preferred payout MergeCo will produce significant cash flows
- * Initial feedback from rating agencies in support of planned capital management strategy
- * Plan maintains capitalization at above "AA" SandP level
