Employee Talking Points

Corn wet milling is a natural next step for Bunge

The acquisition of Corn Products is consistent with Bunge's growth strategy of entering complementary value chains in which they can leverage their expertise and operations to succeed

Corn Products and Bunge are a good fit they complement each other commercially, geographically and operationally

The transaction will create a stronger company that offers customers a broader product portfolio and better customer service

The companies service some common customer groups, including food processing, bakery, animal feed and others

The combined company will have additional opportunity for growth in important geographies

Core geographies where both companies have significant operations, such as North America, Brazil and Argentina

And other geographies where the companies can leverage each other's operations to enter or expand (Corn Products in India, China and Southeast Asia; Bunge in Mexico, South America and Africa)

Opportunities will exist to generate greater value from existing operations. Specifically:

Improved logistics, risk management

Enhanced product development and innovation

Shared distribution

No significant changes in operations are anticipated

We understand Bunge's goal to be to create a larger, stronger and more diverse company with more opportunities for the enterprise and its employees

Some synergies in administrative functions are anticipated, but no closures of industrial operations are expected as a direct result of the combination

Corn Products will retain operational HQ in Chicago area and keep its name

Stay focused on existing goals, customers and operations

The transaction is expected to close in the fourth quarter of this year

Until then, operations, customer relationships, policies and procedures will continue as normal

Integration will be handled openly and fairly

An integration team composed of representatives from both companies will be established. It will begin the careful and deliberate process of planning the best and most efficient organizational structure

We will follow our core values of respect and integrity, and will keep you informed of major decisions
